Listen, listen, listen while I sing— There's mirth, mirth in everything! In laughing eyes' quick glance, In dashing through a dance, Mirth does my charmed soul entrance!

Listen, listen, listen while I sing— There's joy, joy in everything! In bubbling of fresh streams, In flashing sunlight beams, Joy spackles through my pensive dreams? Listen, listen, listen while I sing-There's hope, hope in everything! in gloom and chill and night, When lost the guiding light, liepe rises ever bright!

Listen, listen listen while I sing— There's love, love in everything! If mirth and hope must die, Still I can opward fly, Love lifts me to the sky! Frem Theadore Winthrop's supe Nicholas for January.

A Good Horse.

"I can't explain what a real good horse is," said one of the best-natured dealers in the street. They are as different as men. In buying a horse, you must look first to his head and eyes for signs of intelligence, temper, courage and honesty. Unless a horse has brains you can't teach him anything, any more than you can a halfwitted child. See that tall bay, there, a fine-looking animal, fifteen hands high. You can't teach that horse anything. Why? Well, I'll show you a difference in heads; but have a care of his heels. Look at the brute's head,-that rounding nose, that tapering forehead, that broad, full place below the eyes. You can't trust him. Kick? Well, I guess so!
